

The National Institute of Labour Studies (NILS) at Flinders University is carrying out the NDIS Survey of Disability Support Providers as part of its independent evaluation of the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS). This evaluation is funded by the Australian Government Department of Social Services (DSS).

This national survey is collecting critical information from the organisations and workers that provide disability care and support. We'd like as many people who are working in the sector as possible to tell us about their experiences.

Your involvement in this survey is vital for building a comprehensive picture of the changes in the disability support sector and the impacts of the NDIS. You will be helping us to understand the realities of working in this sector today. The information you provide will contribute to the future shape of the NDIS as well as the planning and building of the sector's capacity

Who is taking part?

This is a national survey of disability support providers and disability support workers.

What kind of questions will I be asked?

We would like to hear about your experiences and views of working in the sector. The questions include:

- some details about you
- your current employment
- what you think about aspects of your work
- employment in the sector

How can I do the survey?

The survey is only available online. You will receive an invitation to take part if your workplace is taking part in the survey.

How long will it take?

The survey will take around 10 minutes to do. You don't have to complete the survey in one go. You can close the survey and your answers will be saved. To complete the survey you can re-use the link and your login.

Do I have to participate?

Taking part in the survey is your choice.

You can choose not to answer questions.

No one will know if you completed the survey or not. All responses to the survey are confidential and identifying details will be removed prior to analysis.

The information you give will only be used for the evaluation of the NDIS by NILS at Flinders University.
